The suit brought by the Rochschild Brothers against R. H. Dibreil and W. W. Weisiger, for the recovery of upwards of two hundred hogsheads of tobacco, will be tried on Friday next. The circumstances are ns follows: In the years of 1-59 and 1-10, the Rothschild Brothers, of Paris, lought in this city, by their agent, upwards of two hundred hogshead of tobacco, of needigar excellence, which was denosite. the shape of tobacco notes were given for it. After the evacuation the tobacco was taken possessing of Colonel John S. Loomis as captured property. This claim was not contested, and Colonel Loomis ordered the hegsheads to be coopered up and the tobacco to be premared for sale at auction. Mesers. Bothschild, hearing of this proceeding, brought suit against Mesers. Dibrell & Weisiger, and presented the receipts of those gentlemen for the hogsheads taken charge of by them. An application was made to Judge Lyons to enjoin the parties not to sell the tobacco. He granted the injunction, and had the tobacco placed in the custody of Thomas U. Dudley, city sergeant. FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1866.

The remains of Gen. Roger W Hanson are expected in our city to-morrow on their way to their allotted restingplace in Lexington. After having lain for years in the bloody and historic soil where he fell, he goes to his green-enrtained couch in his old home, where the some flowers will shed perfume and the same birds and winds and fountains make sie over him and his sleeping kin-

Roger W. Hanson was a man of remarkable qualities of mind and heart. He felt strong regard for his friends and had the power to attract the strongest regard from them. With but ordinary education, he had extraordinary atrength of tellect, direct, vehement, and irresistible in its movements, and a natural keenness and sagacity rarely equalled. Whether at the bar or in legislative halls or in the rough conflicts of a political canvass, he was ever a most formidable antagonist whom few, however great their confidence in themselves, were unreluctant to encounter. He never felt more at home than when he found himself and a strong foe the stronger the better, grappling like two lions in an amphitheater.

Yet Roger W. Hanson was of a most kind and gentle nature, ever delighting in a circle of congenial friends and ever the life of it. Upon such occasions he was always ready to throw himself upon the free and bounding waves of passing enjoyment and let them bear him whithersover they would. In his hours of aocial hilarionsness, he seemed not so much to possess the wild spirit of fun as to be posessed by it. And yet he had a true and high and earnest soul, not less capable of sternness than of joy. His chivalry was equal to that of Napoleon's Marshal of the white plume. He reveled in dangers as a aca-bird in a storm. He fought heroically in two wars. He aided in bearing his country's banner victorionsly in Mexico. and he fell fighting under the Conferate flag upon the dreadful field of Shiloh, which was reddened by no more gallant blood than that which flowed from his

Kentucky is to-day the guilty symbol of a guilty neutrality. Had Kentucky not been permitted to stand silent or half-hearted between the opposing armies during the rebellion, she would not now be a citadel of treason more formidable than South Carolina or Georgia. So powerfully disloyal are the majority of her population, that if all the colored people in the State were permitted to vote, their suffrages, added to those of the white loyalists, would still leave the rebels in a tremendous majority. And when the rebel erganization of every Southern State has been dismantled or superseded by a truly Republican Government, Kentucky will stand it he single monument of the blunder of allowing her people to stand neutral in The elections of Tnesday, as we fully anticipated, resulted very much like those that took place a few weeks before. Probably every State that voted went for the radical candidates. The radical strength in Congress does not appear to ve been increased by the Fall elections. but we presume that it has been but little if at all diminished. All this is bad. It is extremely had,

But it absolves as from no daty. We have a country, and, whether in storm or in shine, we must work for it. Our fathers fought seven years to establish it, we ately fought nearly four years to maintain it, and we are now bound to render to it, if need be, the service of the rest of

The existing condition of things, it is true, is far from encouraging but there is nothing in it that should be permitted to discourage us. The radicals, according to appearances, have a lease of Congressional power for the next three years, and, within that period, they may it is true, destroy the Union beyond all power of restoration, but we can at least hope otherwise, for the Union has exhibit ed and is exhibiting a atrength of vitality, that, under any ordinary circumstances, would make it immortal. Besides (we say it not irreverently | God rules in heaven and Andrew Johnson is President of the United States.

Events may occur within three years to occur, which, however strong the spirit of radicalism may be at this time, will, through the natural operation of political and moral influences, sweep the radical ism of Congress and the radicalism of the people away together. Party ties and party prejudices, especially when created by excited and violent conflicts, are power-South, furnish, in proportion to popula-tion, more men for the Union armies than ful, but not always irresistible. Not many months can possibly go hy before great any other State? Indeed, the radical preponderance is so trifling as t be scarcely worth taking into account in any estimate of the results of her future elections. One serious hlader of Congress, one brilliant and strikingly patriic and enccessful movement of the President, one great political event, revealing to all eyes, as by the light of an electric flesh from the sky, what is around us and before us, might be enough to revolutionire, as it were instantaneously, the political state of the country.

We have not seen the letter, but it is characterized by the Memphis correspondent of the Atlanta Intelligencer as "a most encouraging and manly" one. This correspondent adds: "While all his views are in perfect consonance with the great heart of the Southern people, that portion of his letter in which he tells us, that, in spite of the recent radical successes at the North and the dark complexion of the next Congress, the President is still as firm in the belief of the final success of his policy of restoration as he is that it is the only constitutional a highly-educated man and the possessor of a large property, and is moreover a famous sportsman. Strapped into a sort of bowl on his horse's back, he rides like a very fiend after the hounds. He is also a great yachtsman, and a couple of years ago he published a handsome volume giving an account of his voyage to Albania in his vessel, the Eva, so called after the wife of the Anglo-Norman chief Strongbow, the daughter of Dermod MacMarrough, king of Leinster, from whom this Mr. Kavanagh is lineally descended. Thia King Dermod has an evil notoriety in Irish history, as it was he who first invited as he is that it is the only constitutional and available method by which the States can be restored to their former unity couraging at this time. Dr. Leftwich writes from Washington, where he has been spending some time, Dr. Leftwich, we believe, has remained in Washington ever since the adjournment King Dermod has an evil notoriety in Irish history, as it was he who first invited and brought over the English to this country. He sought their aid to enable him to resist the forces brought against him by Roderick O'Connor, King of Ireland, and the Prince of Brefny, whose wife had either eloped with Dermod or fled to his protection from her husband. It was on this incident that Moore founded his song of "The valley lay smiling before me," in which occur the well-known lines:

On our side by viring and Erln. Congress. His relations with Presicites the following passage from the letter I have designedly said but little of An-irew Johnson, whose deeds speak loudly mough in his behalf, and will be remem-ered with admiring gratitude as long as Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, is receiving commendation from various quarters for breaking through the absurd custom of always appointing Friday as the day of execution for criminals convicted of capital offences. The Cleveland Leader says the practice was founded on superstition and that it gave a lad repute to the sixth day of the week which people lead come to call "Hangmans lan". The topic was suggested to the Leader's consideration from the fact that of two executions, for which Governor Curtin has recently issued warrants, one was performed on a Monday and another is to take place in Lycoming county next is to take place in Lycomiug county next Tuesday.

The excitement over the Fenian trials is diminishing. The court opened this morning at the usual hour. Patrick UNcal was the first prisoner placed in the dock. Mr. McKenzie, before the prisoner pleaded, moved that the indictment be quashed on the ground of misjoinder of the court, and that the offence was committed in the county of Welland, and therefore could not be tried in the county of York, it being of two connities.

Mr. R. A. Harrison contended that his learned triend had placed a wrong construction on the interpretation of the clause, and that as to the second ground, his Lordship had already overruled that objection by his decision is the application of the same nature minde yesterday.
